The cane, which is longer than the ordinary ones on account of Mr. Lincoln's great height, is black, with a buckhorn handle. The wood is studded with fourteen knots, each having a top of silver upon which one letter of Lincoln's name Is engraved, so that the whole series of letters from handle to ferrule spell "Abraham Lincoln."

A metal band Joins the bandle to the stick, and this bears an Inscription showing that the cane was presented to the president by his "Old Chum, S. Strong," in 1860. On the handle is another plate which shows that the stick was given to the late Frank B. Carpenter, the celebrated artist and personal friend of Lincoln, by Mrs. Lincoln. In 1891 Curpenter was penniless and pledged the stick to his cousin, Fannie Mathewson, in return for a loan of $500. About two years ago the artist died. He had not redeemed the pledge, Fannie Mathewson, Lincoln's through her attorneys, aut favorite thorized the suic. The price cane.

To me they are only fine, large words meaning nothing. My mother had a fondness for such. She liked to say them and see other dogs look surprised and envious, as wondering how she got so much education.

But indeed it was not real education; it was only show. She got the words by listening in the dining room and drawing room when there was company and by going with the children to Sunday school and listening there, and whenever she heard a large word she said it over to herself many times and so was able to keep it until there was a dogmatic gathering in the neigh borhood; then she would get it off and surprise and distress them all, from pocket pup to mastiff, which rewarded her for all her trouble. I couldn't have kept up much long-er. Then I began taking that great strength-giving tonic, Quinona. My ner-vousness soon disappeared. My appetite returned, and my whole system has been made new. Quinona agreed with me from the start. I am now a well and strong woman, look better and feel better than ever did before. Never have a sick day now. Quinona alone did all this for me, and I cannot praise its great worth too

Max Gersumky, 168 Tremont St., Hoston, Mass., says: "I have found Quinona the best preparation I have ever used to build up the ran-down system. It brought me fresh strength, vitality and good health when I was completely run down. I recommend it to all who are suffering from the effects of overwork or past sickness."

Girls want dolls. This year there are rag dolls, rubber dolls, knitted dolls, paper dells, celluloid dolls, stockinet dolls, china dolls and bisque dolls. The rag doll is having a revival, and there are some big dells in pink frocks and sunbonnets that are delightful. Houses for dolls have grown very palatial. They are furnished with the fashionable elegance and completeness of the abode of wealth they mimic. Everything can be had, from a set of empire furniture to a sewing machine. For the luncheon and dinners and ten parties to be given among the smart set of dolldom are sets of china decorated most daintily.

These pretentious establishments kept up by Mr. and Mrs. Doll require a retinue of servants, but one can engage a cook, a butler or a child's nurse at the toy shops at a moment's notice. There are, too, all sorts of shops in doll-landgrocer, butcher, millinery, candy, flower, hairdressing-in fact, almost every kind of shop known to the really, truly world. Some of these shops come this year with awnings in front that can be let up and down.

The toy theater in its most up to date form has scenery for three different nots, with the requisite actors and the dialogue itself to be read while the action is carried out on the stage.

Conspicuous among the toys which have been imported this season are large windmills of Dutch and German style, which are fascinating toys, and when their arms are set n-whirling interest older as well as childish eyes. Mills with water wheels belong to the same class of new and wonderfully attractive playthings.

If I may be allowed to express an opinion, I want to tell you that the infernal scene was very bad The sunset ripple was weefully lacking in effect. It was certainly not true to nature, if it was so intended.

To which Sir Henry replies:

Really your criticism is quite apt. You see, the rippie got turned upside down that night by some mechanical error, and the rain, instead of falling down, fell up. I don't wonder you didn't think it true to nature. How could you?

And Sir Henry smiles audibly.
